Andrew Cepo, of At-

O. A. Ruggles, 82, of R. D. 1, Deerfield, a retired Portage county farmer, was killed when he attempted to cross highway Route 14 in front of his farm, three miles north of Deerfield, at 4 p. m. Friday and was struck by a passing car.

The automobile which struck Ruggles was traveling northwest and was driven by Andrew Cepo, 48, of Atwater, it was reported by State Patrolman D. H. Cole.

According to the officer's report, the victim was returning from the farm on the opposite side of the road where he had gone to do a few chores. He walked directly in front of the car, apparently unaware of its approach.

His injuries consisted of a fractured skull, broken neck and a fractured right leg. Dr. J. R. Turner, Portage county coroner, said Ruggles died within 10 minutes after being hit. He absolved Cepo of blame in connection with the accident.

Mr. Ruggles, who had lived in the vicinity of Deerfield all his life, was born June 28, 1856.

Surviving are his wife, Matilda; two daughters, Mrs. P. E. Norton of Yale, Miss Leeta Ruggles of Cleveland; two sons, Frank of Cleveland, Paul of White Plains, N. Y.; one grandchild and two great-grandchildren.

Her modeling and figure were perfect, claims Helen Hirsch (above), until her employers found she was an officer in the models' union and decided her hips were too large. BAR STUDYING COURT PROPOSAL

Reconsider Bill to Create
Second Judgeship In County

LISBON, Feb. 25.—Reconsideration of the bill to create a second common pleas court in the county, will mark a special meeting of the bar association scheduled for Tuesday afternoon in Court Room No. 2.

The meeting was called by Attorney Charles Boyd, president of the association, following expression of opposition to the measure by many residents of the county. The association is expected to either amend or abandon the plan.

As drawn up originally for submission to the legislature the bill provides for the creation of a second common pleas court to be known as the division of domestic relations. The majority of the opposition is said to center on the definition of the court's duties although some opponents contend there is no need in the county for a second court.

State Senator Roy Merryman and Representative John Stephenson who were to submit the bill last week to the legislature, have deferred action pending investigation of its provisions by a committee representing the East Liverpool Chamber of Commerce.

LOYALTY DRIVE OPENS SUNDAY

City-wide Crusade Sponsored By Ministerial Association To In-

A weekly report of the attendance will be filed with Rev. Ira Lavigne, secretary of the association, and published in The News, showing the ranking of the Sunday schools according to percentage of attendance.

Following the close of the campaign, a city-wide Sunday school night will be held with each school presenting a part of the program.

The next meeting of the troop will be held March 1 at the St. Paul's school.

HOPKINS ASKS CO-OPERATION FROM BUSINESS

Declares Administration
Is Out to Promote Business Recovery

PLAN OUTLINED
BY SECRETARY

First Comment Indicates
Reaction To Talk
Is Favorable

(By Associated Press)

D38 MOINES, Feb. 25.—American business men today studied an invitation from Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins for labor, agriculture and business to join government "on the same side of the table" and work out the nation's economic problems.

In a speech filled with references to "free enterprise," "private investment" and "business confidence," the secretary here last night asserted the national administration was out to promote recovery "with all the vigor and power at its command."

"The government earnestly wishes that these things (recovery) be accomplished, and we ask that labor, the farmer and business men join us not across, but on the same side of the table to accomplish our common purpose," Hopkins asserted.

Favorable Reaction

First comment from business circles indicated a favorable reaction in general, to the speech. However, there were some who softened their appraisal of his plans with a suggestion that business wait for a practical demonstration of his program.

Hopkins' first formal address since joining President Roosevelt's cabinet was made in a business setting. He was introduced to a Des Moines Economic club dinner by B. P. Kauffman, president of a bank here. On the other side of the speaker sat W. A. Harriman of Harriman, N. Y., chairman of the Union Pacific railroad board of directors and chairman of the business advisory council for the department of commerce.

Harriman said the speech "should be encouraging to everyone responsible for the conduct of business." He predicted Hopkins will be "the greatest secretary of commerce we ever had."

Love Starvation Is Blamed For Youth Mischievousness

Seek Affection From Members of Own Families and Start Fires If They Don't Get It

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE,
Associated Press Science Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Starvation for love by members of their families is the reason some young children of six to seven develop a fire-setting mania, a report to the American Orthopsychiatric association said today.

This report, by Dr. Helen Yarnell of Bellevue hospital, puts a different light on this mischievousness than has been ascribed by famous psychological studies.

The psychological studies blamed the fire mania on frustrated child sexual desires. Dr. Yarnell, in studying 60 small children whose fire-setting proclivity was so bad that the police caught them, found that most of the youngsters had "sexual

DEMOCRATS SEE FEW NEW LAWS; PEACE SOUGHT

ANTI-MONOPOLY
PLANS SUBDUED

Administration Efforts
Extended In Behalf
Of Business

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Roosevelt administration's effort to quiet business fears and encourage private investment gained impetus today from a statement by Democratic Leader Barkley of the senate that he had received word no general anti-monopoly legislation would be offered at this session of congress.

Hears From O'Mahoney

Barkley told reporters he had received this information from the special committee of legislators and government officials appointed to investigate monopoly and the other economic subjects.

The senate leader added, however, that the committee would ask additional funds—probably at least as much as the $500,000 appropriated for it last year—to continue its investigations.

Barkley's announcement was one of several apparent indications that the crop of new laws turned out at the present session of congress might be comparatively small.

Another was the statement of Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, in an address last night at Des Moines, Iowa, that "with the emphasis shifted from reform to recovery, this administration is now determined to promote that recovery with all the vigor and power at its command."

Seek Party Peace

Speaking privately, several senators said the desire of many Democrats for party peace would tend to hold the session's output of new laws to a minimum. Saying continued Democratic strife would impair the party's chances in the presidential campaign next year, they predicted congressional leaders would avoid dissension by compromise or complete elimination of some measures.

A survey of pending bills indicated to some veteran lawmakers that, aside from regular appropriation measures, less than a dozen important proposals were likely to be acted upon before the session ended.

TAX RESPONSE IS FAVORABLE

First Half Collections
Satisfactory, Says
Treasurer

LISBON, Feb. 25.—Tax collections for the first half of 1938, opening February 11, were characterized as "very satisfactory" by County Treasurer Olen Dawson Friday.

Dawson said that while the collections were better than in preceding years, no figures would be available for several weeks. He credited the improvement to statements which the office mailed to taxpayers just before the collection period opened.

Over 35,000 statements were mailed to both current and delinquent tax payers. The office was unable to mail some statements because addresses in these cases were not available. Tax payers who did not receive a statement are requested to contact the office, leaving their address for future reference.

The deadline has been fixed for March 11 and the state tax commission has indicated it will not grant an extension.

SEEN AS DIRECT
SLAP AT FRANCE

Future of Millions of
Other Italians Abroad
Questioned

(By Associated Press)

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Thousands of Italian citizens living in France were leaving for their homeland today in a mass exodus under Premier Mussolini's repatriation order for Italians abroad.

An Italian embassy spokesman said the exodus was "only a beginning."

Take Special Trains

Italian officials said several hundred Italians were leaving Paris aboard special trains in the afternoon while "nearly 3,000" were returning to their native land from Marseille, Bordeaux and other cities.

Although the movement officially was in response to the repatriation order under which Italians in all lands were being called home, it was viewed in many quarters as a direct slap at France.

Officially, the French government accepted Rome's official reason that the repatriation followed the Fascist plan to get most of the Italians living abroad back to work in Italy.

Despite this reason, the occurrence of the repatriation at a crucial moment in Italian-French relations was viewed by responsible quarters as due to one of two things:

1. Either Italy feared war with France might come soon or;

2. Italy wanted "to frighten" the French into believing she was preparing to back up colonial demands on France with action.

1,900 Leave Corsica
Today's repatriation movement followed by a day's disclosure that Italian residents of Corsica, French island department near the Italian mainland, were returning home. The Italian embassy estimated the number to leave Corsica on Monday at about 1,600.

(Italy estimates the number of Italians living abroad at 10,000,000, a figure which does not take into account naturalizations and includes the children born of Italians abroad.)

(According to this figure there are 992,000 Italians in France, 3,749,000 in the United States, 1,837,000 in Brazil and 1,829,000 in Argentina. Mussolini wants to get as many as possible of these under the Italian flag.)

NO IMPROVEMENTS

If all the hot air blown off about fortifying the island of Guam could be put into a bag, and let it out a little at a time Ohio could keep warm till the end of March.

The plain fact of the matter is, admirals are the only ones who want to fortify the island and admirals are notoriously eager to fortify everything in sight. It's their specialty.

The way people who pay the admirals' salaries feel about it was briefly summed up in the house of representatives by Rep. Stephen Boies of Wisconsin. Subsequently, the house voted against the proposal. Guam, Rep. Boies gravely reminded his colleagues, is "a little island entirely surrounded by Japan." It seems silly, therefore, to make any improvements on it for the Japanese. Even the admirals have admitted it would fall into Japanese hands in the event of war—after, of course, a spirited but foredoomed defense by the Yanks.

TELL US MORE

Nudists of this state seem determined to fight for their constitutional rights to take advantage of the sun as they darn well please. They're resisting a bill before the legislature outlawing nudism with all their might.

They insist it's all right to stretch out in the hot sun and to let it beat down on your bare back if that's what you want to do.

They say it's not indecent on a warm day to go romping off in the sunbeams totally unhampered if the mood strikes you.

They claim it's a human being's right to lie down and roll on the grass as naturally as an unhampered baby if he chooses.

They point out that the sun's a great institution, with great therapeutic value, and that good, wholesome sunshine never hurt anybody.

Yes, yes, go on. Ohioans remember the sun well. They're in favor of it 100 percent. It can start beating down anytime. The nudists should be careful about suburn, though. For their own good there should be a law. Anyone who wants to go any further into undressing than a modern bathing suit is downright reckless.

HARBINGER

The tendency of thought to resist a static condition has been the hope of all who think of peace as a state of mind as well as a condition of international relations.

They have waited for thought to rebound from the extremism of the Czechoslovak experience, when the western world seemed on the verge of reaching for its guns and letting fly. They have waited for a new balance of thought as well as of power.

It is risky to say reaction has set in. One cannot be sure of anything so diffused and intangible as a trend of thought. It is a fact of interest, nevertheless, that Walter Lippman, whose insight into such matters is acknowledged, says in his opinion the world has passed the most critical point of danger.

Germany and Italy, as he sees the situation, have reached and gone beyond the zenith of their military power; Great Britain and France, potentially stronger, have not approached their zenith of preparedness yet. The time for the aggressors to strike was last September, not now. The war crisis, therefore, is past.

As a harbinger of a happier spring than has seemed likely for some time, Mr. Lippman may be compared with the robin, itself. He has made a cheerful sound when none was expected, which may result in the first robin stories starting early this year too.

TAXES — AND THE STOCKHOLDER

As an American citizen you have a stake in American government. The money it spends is your money.

As a stockholder in the greatest of all corporations—the government of the United States—you have an interest in knowing how much money it is spending, what it is spent for and what dividends it pays.

Here are some items in the balance sheet:

The government of the United States—the federal government—is spending at the rate of $21,000,000 a day. It is collecting from you for operating expenses $14,000,000 a day.

For the past nine years it has been going deeper into debt at the rate of $7,000,000 a day—and is still going.

If you were a stockholder in a private business corporation that made such a report, you'd probably wonder if you could get better returns by putting your money into something else.

It is not merely the amount of money that is spent that is important. Equally important is what it is spent for. Out of every dollar of national income 25 cents is spent for government—all government.

This means that only 75 cents is available for private enterprise—business—for it is an inflexible rule that you can't spend the same money for two things at the same time. In other words, the more government you buy, the less money you will have for business enterprise.

The longer the political payrolls grow, the shorter are the business payrolls. Neither the Congress nor the President, of the United States nor all the heads of all the bureaus and commissions in Washington can coin a dollar that will pay two dollars worth of debts.

You have the choice, then, of investing your earnings in productive business enterprise or in non-productive government enterprise. You can spend what you think you need or desire or you can turn it over to your political representatives to spend it for what they think you ought to have.

It is not a partisan political question. It is an economic question. And it's a question which demands your careful consideration.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, February 26

SUNDAY'S horoscope has auguries of some rather decisive and important activities, possibly in connection with clerical, legal or educational associations, rather than business of a commercial nature. In this direction there may be problems best solved by patience and steady work. The mind may be well stimulated in the direction of proper procedure. Social or sentimental affiliations seem to hint of intrigue or secrecy, although not sinister.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which there might be litigation or some mental problems, which may require much study, keen insight and sound judgment to arrive at satisfactory decisions. Private affairs are subtle, curious or intriguing, with happy or surprising denouements.

A child born on this day may have a steady and dependable character, realizing brilliant intellectual attainments which may place it in public life.

For Monday, February 27

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a decidedly perplexing and contradictory one with certain confusing issues requiring sound judgment and wise counsel of responsible friends or advisors. There may be legal or financial aspects, or lures to changes, which are hazardous. Let cool and sagacious means be used rather than tempestuous, impulsive and rash conduct. Be alert to fraud and deception.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which success depends on the wisdom of trustworthy friends, rather than their own uncertain and overstimulated judgment. Calmness, steadiness and system win over rash, quarrelsome and passionate action. Be alert to deceit and fraud, and be prudent with all writings and papers.

A child born on this day may have a many-sided and complex nature, difficult to understand and handle. While impulsive, reckless and violent in some ways, it may use its fine mind and sturdy character in others. Its yearning for good education should be satisfied, as much good fortune may depend on that.

A man who won $100,000 in a contest last year has only $60,000 of it left. But he's no spendthrift, unless one considers the $37,000 he gave to his once thrifty Uncle Sam an extravagance.

A circulator of counterfeit money has just been sentenced to the penitentiary, proving again that inflation of the currency is still strictly a Government function.

Conclave Flag

When this flag floats from the balcony of the Vatican in place of the usual white and gold ensign it is the signal to the world that the conclave of the cardinals, meeting to select a new pope, is under way.

Sees Eyestrain As Source Of Variety Of Discomforts

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EYESTRAIN produces a set of discomforts which may be readily recognized as related to misuse of the eyes, or they may be so apparently disconnected as not to be recognized except by one "in the know."

It is not hard to realize that pain in the eyeballs, burning and itching of the lids, headache in the frontal region and redness of the conjunctivae are due to some abuse of vision. But nausea, vertigo, dizziness, dullness of cerebration, indigestion and sick headache—all of which can be caused by eyestrain—may for long periods of suffering be ascribed to other things.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Eyestrain may be temporary, due to overuse of good eyes at reading, sewing, the movies, exposure to a bright light, or it may be chronic, due to deficiencies of the eyes or the eye muscles themselves.

Easily Corrected

Temporary eyestrain in a good eye due to misuse is easily corrected. A few hours' rest of the eyes, relief from light and overstrain—time out lying down in a dark room with a cold compress over the eyes—will invariably fix things up. When conditions of living or work are such as to produce the symptoms constantly, proper readjustment of light or strain will be a natural step. Many apparently obscure headaches or recurrent attacks of listlessness or indigestion can be corrected by such simple measures. As in the case of writer's cramp, individuals vary a great deal as to susceptibility to influences that cause eyestrain.

Eyestrain due to an ocular defect may have one of three causes—refractive errors, faulty accommodation and imbalance of the muscles of the eye.

Refractive errors are popularly supposed to be the most important. But the connection is not necessarily certain in all cases. An optically perfect eye is almost unknown. And refractive errors are so common that it would be practically impossible to find a person with eyestrain who did not have a slight refractive error. There also are people with gross refractive errors who have no eyestrain. So they cannot be the sole cause or even the most important cause, although, of course, in a case of eyestrain any refractive error should be corrected.

The same applies to a certain extent to accommodation errors. Small ones are rare and cause little or no trouble, large ones are usually due to systemic trouble.

Advice of Oculist

I am inclined to take the advice (although I admit my experience does not warrant my forming a very definite opinion) of those oculists who believe that muscular imbalance or heterophoria (the dynamic relationship of the two eyes working together) is the most potent cause of eyestrain. The movements of each eye are so arranged as to keep it coordinated with the movements of its fellow in such a way as to keep each visual axis always pointing at the observed object. The power of convergence, which is the most important of these coordinated movements, is in the region of 50 per cent in normal people, and may be as low as 20 per cent in cases of eyestrain.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Even pamphlets by Dr. Clendenning can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 W. 45th St., New York City. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

"The Multitude" Is Sermon Theme At Trinity Lutheran

"Calvary Characteristics: The Multitude" is the theme which Rev. George D. Keister has taken for his sermon at the morning worship service of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow, the first Sunday in Lent or Invocavit.

Services for the church and announcements follow:

Sunday school, 9:45; (Acts 8:14-25) Charles W. Youtz, supt.

Religion must be kept free from commercialism. When the churches stoop to the ways of the world, then the spiritual power of the church will be hampered. When worldliness gets the upper hand in the work of the church, then weakness shall mark the program of the church. The strength of the church must rest upon the work of God not the labors of men. The Spirit of the living God will bring success to the Kingdom, but not if hindrances and obstructions are placed in the path by the churches and their membership.

Morning worship, 11:00. Sermon. The Lenten season is not kept as a special time "to do penance for sins." We know that "Christ also hath once suffered for sin, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God." We realize that it is not by any work we might do, but only through Christ's merits that forgiveness is procured. While we do not do penance for sins, we do repent of our sins. We approach our Heavenly Father and like the prodigal son we say, "I have sinned against heaven and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son." Realizing our lost condition we pray, "God be merciful to us as sinners."

"I know not how that Calvary's Cross

A world from sin could free;

I only know its matchless love

Has brought God's love to me."

Luther league, 6:30; devotional topic, "Alone With God"; leader, Allen Fehr.

The Suffering Savior Speaks

"Could ye not watch with Me one hour?" Three disciples were chosen by Jesus to be with Him in Gethsemane. A mysterious struggle began. His soul was exceeding sorrowful even unto death. He was in agony. He prayed. He prayed more earnestly. But He also yearned for human companionship and sympathy. Peter, James and John were to stand by. They were to watch with Him.

They failed Him. They slept while He agonized. Once and again He came and found them sleeping. But there was no outburst of anger, no indignant dismissal of these drowsy disciples, only the gentle rebuke in the form of a question: "What, could ye not watch with Me one hour?"

Even in the throes of His struggle with sin and death Jesus was forbearing, the compassionate Savior, who would not break the bruised reed. He knew that these disciples, specially chosen and favored though they were, were only weak mortals. He made allowance for their frailties.

So He deals with men today. It is a comforting fact. It heartens us in those moments of awful remorse, when we realize that we too have failed Him. We too sleep, when we should be wide awake. Temptations overpower us and sin blacken our record. But He who was tempted in all points like as we are understands and forgives. To do that He agonized on Calvary. Gently He speaks to us, calling attention to our faults, offering to cleanse us from all iniquities, and urging us to do better.

Such love is irresistible. It puts iron into our wavering will. It nerves us to battle more strenuously against our sins. We must not let sleep get the best of us. On our guard we shall be lest weak flesh disgrace the willing spirit.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias. . . . And a great multitude followed Him, because they saw His miracles which He did on them that were diseased." (John 6:1,2).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine origin of Jesus gave Him more than human power to expound the facts of creation, and demonstrate the one Mind which makes and governs man and the universe" (p. 539).

Coincidence? More Like Miracle

Flaming wreckage of passenger car

Occupants of this flaming automobile were really lucky to escape with minor injuries after a series of events which befell it. The car left the road near Springfield, L. I., crashed into an electric light pole which promptly toppled on the auto roof. A broken tension wire fell on the gas tank and the explosion which followed enveloped the car in flames. When the light pole fell, it set off a police alarm system which summoned the police who saved the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cummings and John C. Wright.

Isn't it marvelous how the intricate machine of commerce constantly gathers the necessities, conveniences and luxuries of life from the four corners of the earth and puts them down right here in our home town?

Have you ever stopped to think what an important part ADVERTISING plays in making all this possible?

Without advertising, no merchant could afford to risk a large investment in merchandise — and wait and wait till some chance customer happened in. . . . Without advertising, you would be unaware of the many lovely, useful needful things assembled in the stores for your convenience. . . . Without advertising, finding what you wanted at a price you could afford would be a matter of luck or of patient plodding from store to store.

Mass production and sales volume — through advertising — have brought to the American people an ease and comfort of living that would have been beyond the wildest dream of kings of old.

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXIII

Mattresser, a few mornings later, looked up with a frown from his task of examining the breach of one of his guns. There was no mistaking the booming voice, the heavy tread of the approaching guest.

"Who the devil let that fellow in. Humphreys?" he muttered.

"He never waits to be let in anywhere, that Dutchman don't, milord." Humphreys complained.

The door was flung open. M. J. van Westreene stepped across the threshold—a huge grotesque figure in his short shooting coat and his long legs tightly encased in breeches and gaiters.

"Good morning, Lord Mattresser," he boomed out with spurious heartiness. "What a day! A clear sky, how the pheasants will tumble!"

"I see you are carrying your gun," Mattresser remarked. "You didn't expect to use it in the line coming up, did you?"

"I did not. I say to myself when I leave the boat—perhaps Lord Mattresser will like an hour's or so walk before lunch. If so, then an I for company—and behold, dinner is in the pot!"

"Sorry to disappoint you," Mattresser regretted. "All my outlying land is on the other side and I never go near my covers on off days."

There was a timid knock at the door. Humphreys threw it open and Elisabeth entered. She stopped short when she saw van Westreene.

"I am so sorry," she apologized. "I understood you were alone."

"Come in, please, Mademoiselle Starnier," Mattresser invited. "I am just looking through my kit before I push off—not that Humphreys ever forgets anything."

"I come and I try to tell Lord Mattresser that it is too beautiful a day to spend thinking of anything but sport," van Westreene put in with a bow of welcome. "It is a day to roam the country with a gun on one's shoulder and to kill. The light is wonderful."

"I was going to the village," Elisabeth remarked, turning to Mattresser. "I wondered if I could do anything for you."

"Or me," van Westreene proposed. "If there is no shooting I go to the village, too. I post your letters. I send your telegrams—what you wish."

Mattresser smiled. He was beginning to find the Dutchman's persistence amusing.

"My telegrams are always telephoned to Norwich," he confided, and Yates sees to all the letters. Perhaps, after all, I had better accept your invitation and take out a gun for an hour."

"Excellent!" van Westreene exclaimed, rising to his feet.

"May I come?" Elisabeth asked. "You can beat for us with that shooting stick," Mattresser suggested with a smile.

"Let us telephone for one of the lads to hurry up on his bicycle, your lordship," Humphreys begged, "or let me come myself."

"You wish I will carry the game," van Westreene proposed. "Have it your own way," Mattresser agreed.

They strolled across the Park and reached the lower gate leading into the wood.

"You take the fourth side," his host told van Westreene. "We will take the third here. You had better keep about fifteen yards ahead of us and if you were not such a 'few' I should like to ask you to be careful because it is rather thin here and there and the drives are not cut straight."

Van Westreene went off as directed. He had scarcely reached the corner of the ride when he stopped short, looking upwards. His gun flashed into position and a pigeon came tumbling down. He thrust the bird into his pocket, reloaded and turned down the fourth ride according to directions. Mattresser gave him a short start and then strolled on. They had barely gone a dozen paces when a cocker spaniel ran ahead put up a woodcock which Mattresser shot neatly between two trees. A minute or two later a cock pheasant came flying over and fell to Mattresser's first barrel.

"Well, it looks as though we were going to have all we can do this morning," he remarked, as he disposed of another woodcock.

After that there was a few moments' lull.

"The Dutchman doesn't seem to be getting much," Mattresser muttered. "I haven't heard his gun since he shot that pigeon."

"I wonder where he is," Elisabeth speculated. "You told him to keep twenty or thirty yards ahead but I cannot see him."

"Neither can I," her companion exclaimed with some irritation. "I'm not surprised. Humphreys was complaining about him only this morning. He is always about twenty or thirty yards ahead of the line. I expect he is almost at the other end of the wood by now."

He pointed into the wood. Half a dozen cock pheasants had risen from a holly bush which should have been within a few yards of van Westreene's beat, and a moment later a woodcock came lobbing up which Mattresser, with a long shot, secured.

"His bird, but he wasn't there," Then, for the first time, Mattresser turned his head and looked behind him down the parallel ride. Almost at the same instant a little gleam of sunshine broke through the canopy of foliage of a tall ash tree and flashed upon something brilliant. Mattresser had no time to shout. He caught Elisabeth by the wrist and flung her to the ground, sprawling down himself by her side. They heard the buzzing of shot exactly where Mattresser's head had been!

Mattresser sprang up as the echoes of the report died away. Half way between the next ride and his own, well behind him instead of in front, the Dutchman was cowering behind a tree.

"My God!" Mattresser exclaimed. "He tried to shoot me! Stay where you are, Elisabeth."

With his gun charmed, watching every movement of the Dutchman, Mattresser plunged into the undergrowth. Van Westreene seemed to hesitate for a moment but his half-raised gun came down under his arm. He gave a little shout of terror.

"Ach, but I am sorry!" he cried. "There was a low woodcock. I would not have shot but I thought you were behind."

Mattresser made no reply. He strode through the bushes recklessly. In a few moments he had reached the Dutchman.

"Didn't I tell you to keep twenty yards ahead of us?" he asked fiercely.

"So I started to walk," van Westreene explained. "I paused to light a cigarette—and you must have passed on quicker than I thought. I regret deeply."

Mattresser leaned his gun against a tree. His eyes were watching the Dutchman with a steady concentration. He strode up to him and laid his hand upon his gun.

"What is it that you wish?" van Westreene demanded. "I am sorry. You would take my gun away?"

"Break it," Mattresser ordered. Van Westreene obeyed, handing the gun to Mattresser, who drew out the second cartridge, glanced at it and thrust it into his pocket.

"Number three," he exclaimed. "You would try to shoot woodcock and pheasants with number three, van Westreene! Why not a rifle and have done with it?"

"I fill my bag from an old box," the other declared angrily. "I did not look at every cartridge. There are sixes and seven here."

"I see," Mattresser observed. "The three were there just in case, I suppose!"

"You cannot suppose," the Dutchman shouted, "that I wish to commit murder!"

"If I had not turned round at that precise moment and the sun had not flashed on the barrel of your gun, that is precisely what you would have done."

"Am I a lunatic then that I should try to shoot my friend in his own woods?" van Westreene demanded. "What have I to gain by such folly? I beg you will permit me to pass. I wish to make my apologies to Mademoiselle."

Mattresser seized the Dutchman's gun by the barrels and threw it into the undergrowth, then he picked up his own weapon.

QUAKERS OUTCLASSSED IN FINAL HOME CONTEST

Fast-Breaking Struthers Quintet Wallops Quakers In Last Game of Schedule

Big Red Displays Uncanny Shooting Accuracy, Clever Offense To Tounce Salem 17-24; Local Reserves Win In Final Game

A clever passing and accurate shooting Struthers High school quintet completely humiliated Salem High school's basketball team in its final home-town performance of the 1938-39 season last night, sending the Quakers down to a dismal 17 to 24 defeat in a lopsided contest.

A near-capacity crowd of more than 1,300 fans watched the fast-breaking Big Red combination hand the Quakers their worst set-back of a 16-game campaign. The defeat was the seventh the Salem lads have suffered this season.

It was the 13th victory Struthers has registered in 16 games, further strengthening the Big Red's claim to a ranking as one of the best scholastic teams in the state.

Best to Show Here

The Struthers quintet of Mike Repasky and Eugene Lunn, forwards, Jack Saunders, center, and Walter McDonald and Gerald Brauer, guards, was unquestionably the finest to perform on local hardwoods this season and should go far in tournament competition if the five stars keep up their present form.

Displaying a fast-breaking offense, which consistently broke players into the open for unguarded shots at the basket, Struthers held a clear cut advantage over the Quakers throughout the game. The Big Red punctured the Salem defense practically at will with the use of clever offensive tactics and lightning passes which caught the Quakers off guard. Struthers worked exceptionally well around the pivot post, and it was from this position that much of the scoring was done.

Supporting their quick-breaking offense, Struthers cagers displayed uncanny accuracy in shooting to take advantage of practically every scoring opportunity.

With Repasky, Saunders, McDonald and Brauer sharing honors, the Big Red rang up 20 field goals, only two of which were made on shots from beyond the foul line. Repasky swished the netting with five field goals, while Saunders, McDonald and Brauer each made four.

Long Range Firing

The defensive work of the Struthers combination, which boasts two players who stand well over the six foot mark, was good enough to force the Quakers to do most of their firing from long range. A big advantage in height aided the Big Red considerably in controlling the rebounds and taking hard tips-off on jump balls.

The defeat was not as hard for the Quakers to swallow as was the possible loss of Bill Schaeffer, center and pivot man, who suffered a shoulder injury while fighting for the ball in the second period. Schaeffer was unable to return to the game after being treated by a doctor and may be lost to the Quakers for tournament competition which opens next week.

The absence of Schaeffer from the team in the second half heightened the Quakers of what little height they possess and undoubtedly weakened their offensive and defensive strength. However, it is not reasonable to assume that Schaeffer's presence would have enabled the Quakers to come from behind and defeat Struthers.

Lack Drive

Lack of drive on offense and erratic ball-handling and floor work prevented the Quakers from keeping pace with their opponents. The Salem lads had a measure of tough luck in shooting, but they were not receiving as many scoring opportunities as Struthers and, as a result, their misfortune on shots did not figure prominently in their downfall.

Struthers outscored the Quakers in every period, making nine points to Salem's three in the first period, 11 points to Salem's eight in the second frame, 11 points to the Quakers' four in the third quarter and 16 points to Salem's nine in the last stanza.

The Big Red assumed a commanding lead late in the first quarter after gaining a 4-3 advantage mid-way in the opening frame. Two field goals and a free throw boosted the Struthers lead to 9-3 shortly after and the Big Red remained out in front throughout the rest of the contest.

Struthers increased its lead to 16-4 early in the second quarter, but a Salem rally cut the advantage down to nine points by halftime. The Big Red led, 20-11, at the intermission.

Again in the third period Struthers started off strong to run its lead to 28-11, but, as in the second frame, the Quakers rallied to slice the Struthers advantage late in the period. The score at the end of the third quarter was 31 to 15.

Biggest Spurge
The Big Red cagers enjoyed their biggest scoring spurge in the final frame, tallying 16 points to safely defend the huge lead they had piled up in the earlier periods. Salem scored nine points in the last frame, the most they counted in any one quarter.

Three Struthers players were ousted from the game late in the fourth quarter for committing too many fouls. McDonald left the floor first on the foul rule, followed shortly after by Saunders and Repasky.

Referee Bye Morgan, who worked a fine game despite fast play and frequent rough action, called 27 fouls during the contest. Salem was given 19 free throws, but converted only eight of these. Struthers made seven of 13 gift shots.

LUTHERANS TOP CARROLL QUINT TO COP SECOND

Wittenberg Closes Cage Schedule With One-Sided Victory

(By Associated Press)
Wittenberg college, defending Ohio conference basketball champions, nestled securely today in second place.

The Lutherans from Springfield concluded their loop schedule last night with a sensational 62 to 38 victory over John Carroll of Cleveland.

It was Wittenberg's 11th conference triumph against a single defeat. Only Wooster tops the Lutherans, the Scots having crushed all conference opposition in scoring 14 straight wins.

Hitherto considered a foe of unusual mettle, Carroll's Blue Streaks actually crumbled before Wittenberg's unrelenting attack.

The first half was a rousing cage contest, ending 26-19 in the Lutherans' favor.

Open Drive

But the Springfield contingent opened a brilliant drive early in the second half, peppering the basket from all angles. Forward Heskett set the victors' tempo with 21 points. Three of his colleagues scored 10 or more.

Kent State trounced a battling Marietta aggregation, 49 to 38, in another Ohio conference tilt. Kent was in front at the half, 25-18. Forward Griffith of Kent accounted for 18 tallies.

Muskingum conquered Denison, 45 to 38, in another loop game. Bob Cullison of Coshocton, speedy forward, found the range for 22 of the Muskies' points. The victors led at intermission, 20-17.

Akron university's Zippers, who recently drubbed the powerful Ball State quintet of Indiana, fell before another and less routed Hoosier team last night, dropping a 36-to-31 decision to Franklin college. Franklin held a 20-17 margin at the half.

Marshall turned back West Virginia Wesleyan at Huntington, 54 to 38. At Cleveland, the Ohio College of Chiropractic defeated Slippery Rock (Pa.) college, 42 to 40, but required two extra periods to turn the trick.

MEET IN COUNTY TOURNEY FINALS

New Waterford and East Fairfield Play For Class B Title

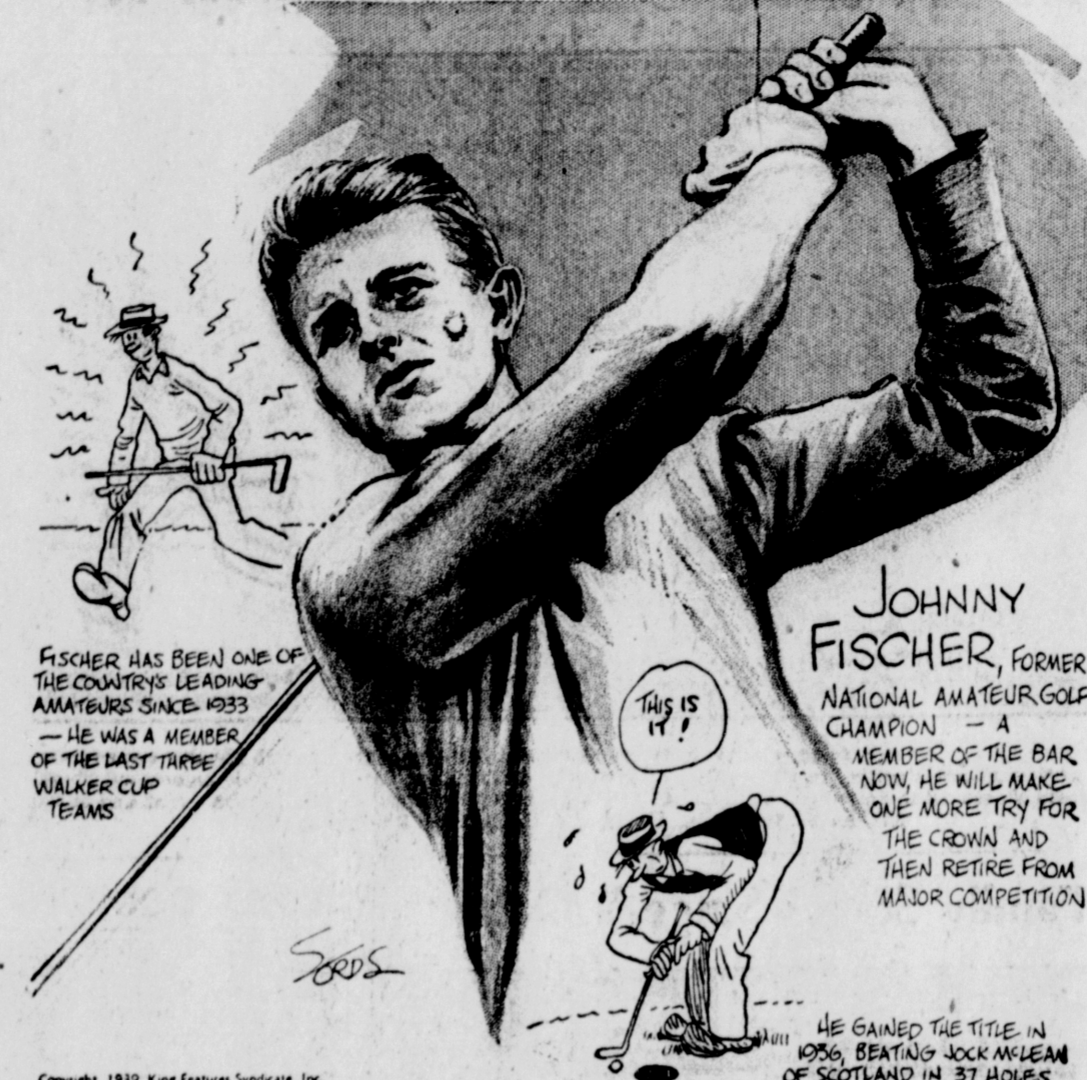

EAST FAIRFIELD, Feb. 25.—New Waterford and East Fairfield High school basketball teams will meet here tonight in the finals of the Columbiana county Class B basketball tournament, the winner to advance to the district tournament at McDonald next week.

Fairfield earned the right to meet New Waterford by defeating Salineville, 32 to 26, here last night. Fairfield led throughout the game after moving out in front by two points in the first quarter. The score at halftime was 18 to 10.

In the first game of a reserve tournament, the New Waterford reserves trimmed Salineville reserves, 25 to 19. The Waterford subs will meet Fairfield seconds in a preliminary game at 8 tonight. Columbiana, the leading Class B team in the country, is not required to compete in the county tournament. State scholastic rules permit Columbiana to go direct to the sectional tournament, without qualifying in the county event.

BOWLING RESULTS

The Grate Recreation ladies fell from first place in the Grate ladies league last night, losing three games to Endres-Gross, which took over the top position for the first time of the season.

Mrs. Ruth Hine paced the Endres-Gross ladies into first place with a 523 series. The Modern Beauty Shop remained in third place, despite losing three games to the Unknowns. The Hurch Budget won three heats with Kaufman's in the other ladies match.

In the Federal men's league at the Masonic alleys, the Democrats continued to set the pace by taking three games from the Sanitary Office to remain in first place.

Other Federal league matches gave Brownie's Amoco two wins over the Ohio Edison, National Brass & Copper two victories over the Eagles and Meisner's Service a pair of wins over the Sanitary Shippers.

The Glidden Paint ladies of Salem avenged a previous defeat by wallowing a Columbiana men's team, 2484 to 2150, in a special match at the Grate lanes last night. Three of the Glidden ladies were over 500. Mrs. Hine had 518, while Mrs. Frieda Orr and Miss Olive Ramsey each had 510.

Theatre Attractions

Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly and Joan Davis in "Tail Spin", at the State theater Sunday through Tuesday.

Ushering in the week's movie fare at the State theater will be the Darryl F. Zanuck production, "Tail Spin", starring Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Nancy Kelly. The picture will show Sunday through Tuesday.

Although the screen has given us many "epics of the air" and countless stories of aviation in one form or another, here is the first attempt to tell the story of women who fly, the thrills that come with their split-second escapes and the heart-throbs behind their spectacular lives. Now it has been told, and with what telling effect!

Brush With Death
With Alice Faye as Trixie, Constance Bennett as Gerry and Nancy Kelly as Lois, "Tail Spin" is the exciting tale of these three who brush wings with death in the gamble they can lose only once. Trixie flies for the money that's in it, Gerry because she finds the sky's the place to hide from love, and Lois because it brings her closer to the man she loves.

Nothing quite like "Tail Spin" has come to the screen in many a season, and from the opening scene to a breath-taking climax you'll know that you are witnessing one of the outstanding pictures of the year. Darryl F. Zanuck, Hollywood's top producer, displays rare genius again in his finest production thus far.

Showing at the State Wednesday and Thursday is Warner Bros. "They Made Me a Criminal," starring their sensational new discovchairman of Consolidated Edison company of New York, and Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth and Southern corporation, commented favorably on Hopkins' speech.

HOPKINS ASKS CO-OPERATION

Declares Administration Is Out to Promote Business Recovery

See Desire to Help

Carlisle said the secretary's comment on utilities "clearly indicates a desire on the part of the administration to remove doubt as to the competitive fields of public ownership and operation and the fields occupied by the private companies." Willkie expressed the view that Hopkins "speaks with the authority of those governmental agencies that have to do with the power industry, his offer of cooperation will be reassuring. The log jam in utility investment, which if broken would mean so much in promoting employment, must be broken by action on the part of government."

The secretary outlined a federal program of encouragement to industry which recommended:

A tolerant attitude by labor in dealing with employers.
Assistance for small business.
Use of utilities as one means of breaking "the log jam of private investment."

No Tax Increase

"No general rise in federal taxes" and amendment of those levies which tend to freeze the necessary flow of capital.

An increased national income to take up the unemployment slack and to balance the budget.
Greater returns to the farmer for his crops.
